Governor Scott Matheson was present at a special Democratic Fund Raising Breakfast, which took place in Heber City on Sept. 27. The event was held at the Wagon Wheel located on Main Street and the meal was provided by Joe Van Wagoner, who is the owner of the restaurant.

Approximately forty people, including city and county officials, attended the $15 a plate function that was planned by Dick Jones, Democratic Fund Raising Chairman of Wasatch County and Floyd Hansen, the Heber City Democratic Chairman.

Wasatch County Commissioner Raymond Jiacoletti introduced Governor Matheson who complimented the public servants of Wasatch County, "I have my strongest personal relationships here over any other county. The atmosphere in this great valley is warm and positive," he said. Matheson proceeded to give his endorsement of Jiacoletti in the upcoming election.

"This election will be a critical one because of Utah's growth rate. In four years time this state has grown by 192,000 people, therefore those elected must offer a commitment not just a contribution." Matheson furthermore stated, that he is anxious to continue serving as governor, and that he will continue to give his all to the office if re-elected.

A belt was given to Governor Matheson, which was made by Dick Jones, and a corsage was presented to Matheson for his wife, Norma, who was unable to attend.
